Something Reliable About Mr. Mackay and His Wealth.

A MAN WHO KNOWS HIM WELL

DR. LORING'S PLUG TEAM.

A Visitor to the Mint Nonniussed by an

No public institution in Philadelphia is so well patronized by visitors as the United States Mint. "Not very long igo," said one of the venerable conductors of that institution to a repre sentative of the News, "we had a rare customer from the South. He was evidently well-to-do, but he had a widebrimmed hat, long hair, flashing eyes and an unconquerable curiosity. He asked questions about everything, and answered him in the best way I ould. At last we stood in the cabinet. could. At last we stood in the cabinet on the second floor, where coins from every country are placed in glass-covered cases. The man from the sunny South eyed a coin struck two thousand years ago in Asia Minor, at an-cient Philadelphia. Below it was a rotice of its are value and worth. The notice of its age, value and worth. The Southerner's eyes contracted as he read the notice, his countenance became the notice, his countenance became savage, he clenched both fists, stamped soundly on the floor, muttering: 'It's a—lie'. 'What?' I exclaimed. 'About that coin,' he said. Thinking he was an Ignoramus, I asked him: 'Didn't you know Philadelphia was 2,000 years old?' 'Of course, you fool,' he blurted out; 'but I didn't think there was a mint here then !' mint here then !

Good Dr. Loring, who is short in his accounts in the management of the Agricultural Bureau, will not have a very happy time if he comes to Washington this winter, says a World correspondent. It is probable that a House committee will investigate the expendi-tures of this bureau under the doctor's management. It would embarrass him management. It would embarrass him greatly to appear before a committee and explain some of the items of money expended under his direction. Just be-fore he went out he sold a pair of ancient plug horses to the bureau for $500. They would not bring over $150 at auction. The good doctor set his own valuation upon this valuable team and then liberally purchased them of himself without haggling about the price.

Economy of a very violent character has struck the General Land office, says the St. Paul Globe's correspondent, and the cierks believe that Chief Clerk Walker imported it from Illinois. Nothing can be got except on requisition. When the soap is out there must be a regular requisition drawn for another cake, and the same is true if peus or paper are wanted. When a box of pens is asked for a dozen are issued, and when a dozen sheets of paper are called for, two or three are issued. dozen pens will last a good while in private practice, and according to a commonly-received belief, it takes a Government clerk a good while to spoil two or three sheets of paper. But the new system is very different from any that has goor regalled and very differ that has ever prevailed and very differ-ent from the system in any other bu-reau of the Interior Department. In regard to soap, the clerks decline to make requisitions and furnish their own soap. As the requisitions can only be made on Mondays it is sometimes very inconvenient to have supplies doled out in homeopathic quantities, for, if the supply is exhausted on Thursday, there is no way of renewing it till the next Monday.

A young man with chopped whis kers, an immaculately-arranged shirt front and his hair ballanced to a straw from the center, and who has been boring the President for office, appropriated the latter at the last reception, and after shaking hands vigorously a few moments, began whispering something in the President's ear. He list-ened patiently for a few seconds, and then drew himself away and said firmly: "No upstairs means no down here. If you had any favor with me you have now forfeited it. Let that suffice." The young man has probably gone home, under the impression that he didn't know just how to "catch on."

"There is not much money in the business now," said one of the Capitol guides to the Minneapolis Tribune correspondent. "We have not made on an average of $5 a week apiece this summer." "What is your best day's work?" I inquired. "We don't have any best now," was the answer. "When I first came here, six or seven years ago, there was money in the business. It was a re markably unpleasant week when we didn't make $35 or $40 apiece. Now it is different. In the first place the num-ber has been increased from three to twelve. Then the employes of the House and Senate, while they have no authority to do so, have in several instances gone into the guide business on their own account, and besides that, there is so much bickering and jealthere is so much bickering and jealousy among ourselves, that it makes it very tough all around to get along at all. It has been a very dull summer.
We expected that the change of Administration would bring in crowds of new people. Although this hope has been realized to some extent, it has not been to the extent of lining our pockets.
From the 1st of July to the 1st of October I think that the receipts of the tweive guides have not averaved more than $50 in the aggregate." "Of course you expect to make up for this in the winter?" "Those who remain will do so, but I have had enough of it.
This year as a Capitol guide and the latt of all the newspaper men is enough for me. I am going to retire, study Italian, and try the business in Rome."

A Cincincati correspondent of the New York World, happening to meet Congressman elect Felton of California the other day, asked him what truth there was in the recently published stories about the heavy financial losses of John W. Mackay. "None at all." was the reply of Mr. Felton, who has been long and intimately acquainted with Mr. Mackay; 'the papers and with Mr. Mackay: "the papers and the public generally do him singular injustice." On being asked how much he thought Mr. Mackay was worth, he said that he was sure he was worth at least $25,000,000 and did not owe a cent. "In what does his wealth consist?" "Well, he has about $10,000,000 in Government bonds. That alone

The Episcopal prayer-book used at the funeral has a remarkable history. It was bought forty years ago in Cinciunati, and after continuous use in peace was carried by him during the war, and has memoranda on the fly-leaf of its presence at Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and various battles of the Atlanta campaign. Later it was brought here, and when the Polaris was fitted out for the fill-fated journey to the Arctic was presented by Colonel Lapton to his life-long friend, Captain Hall, who used it on board that vessel in the ship's service, and it was used to read the service at Capt. Hall's death-bed and over his grave. When the Tyson expedition, under Captain James A. Greer, U. S. N., was sent in search of the survivors, Colonel Lupton called on the correspondent of the New York Hendid, who accompanied the expedition, and asked if the Polaris people were found, and it was found possible, the famous prayer-book might come back to its original owner.

On the night of August 14-15, 1873, a boost from the Tigress carrying Captain Greer and a crew of officers of the ship, with Captain George E. Tyson, the famous Arctic traveller, landed between some ice hummocks above Life Boat Cove, latitude 78° 34' north and made a search of the deserted Folaris camp. Captain Greer and the Herald correspondent stopped behind a moment to examine a pile of destroyed canned provisions and were turning to join the rest of the party, when the correspondent noticed a small book lying open on the bare rock near and picked it up.

It was the Lupton-Hall prayer book, and was open at the page where occurs the prayer for "deliverance from great peril and danger by land and by sea," etc. The rocky debris had drifted into the open book so that it was held open at that Effle Burrows, the 4½-year-old daughter of Policeman Burrows, was run over by car No. 33 of the Washington & Georgetown Rallroad last evening and frightfully mangled. These figures are the best argument or evidence of the practical success this association has attained. The large transactions also indicate that the association has and is accommodating and benefiting a large number of people, who are putting asfde small portions of their carnings systematically as a good investment, or in order to possess a sufficient amount to ultimately secure a home or other property. They induced others to vote that way because they are in a hole with the Buffalo and Indianapolis franchises on their hands. It is intended to frighten Buffalo out of joining the New York State League, but we don't scare worth a cent. They will vote at the spring meeting to drop Buffalo, for they do not expect to run a League club here. The step was made to give them a chance to dispose of the Buffalo franchise, for they must keep it alive to make it salable. The State League meets November 15 and our club will be formed soon after. We shall lease Olympic Park for $2,000 and shall charge twenty-five cents per game. There is a plan now to take in six New York cities and two Canadlan, so that it would be an international league. ABOUT THE VANDERBILTS. Cornellus' Charitable Doings-Inside

Facts from the Family History. "I was much amused the other day," said an jutimate friend of the Vanderbilt family, at the Grand Pacific, "to see that account in the newspapers of how young Cornelius Vanderbili went into Wall street, lost $5,000,000 and how his father had t lost $5,000,000 and how his father had to come to the rescue and pension him off on a promise hever to do so any more. I thought newspapers were better informed than that. It was not Cornelius at all, but William K., of whom that story is told, though there is not much more truth in it as applied to him. I don't believe Corneel Vanderbilt ever bought any stocks for speculation in his life. His grandfather left him $5,000,000 and that has been doubled since by natural accretion. His father gave him his magnificent house. I don't believe the world knows it, but that branch of the Vanderbilt family aims to be a philanthropist. There is no man in New York, perhaps, who distributes so much money in quiet and unostentatious charity as "Corneel' Vanderbilt. He and his wife are devout church people; in fact, the young man's friends fear he is becoming a little cranky on religious matters. He intends some day to become a second l'eatsody, and it would not be a surprise to find him any day endowing some theological seminary, charity hospital, free college or something. He probably disburses $100,000 a year in small charities, and already he cemploys a disbursing agent by the year to see that his benefactions are not misplaced. This agent is an old Chicago newspaper man, Fred Cooke, who used to be city efftor of the Telegraph here. Cooke has gone wild on spiritualism, but he, too, is a crank on charity matters and is devoting his life to that kind of work. Vanderbilt pays him $2,000 a year to devote his whole time to the disbursement of the sums he donates. It is a trustworthy place, for the young millionaire never asks what becomes of his money. He come to the rescue and pension him off or trustworthy place, for the young millionain never asks what becomes of his money.
